LAURA GRAHAM

Both the New York Transit Museum shops and the South Street Seaport Museum shop carry Ms. Graham's jewelry, which in those venues incorporates archival images of Old New York; but she is a photographer and also makes appealing jewelry with her own black-and-white photographs of animals, houses, and even shoes. Images are small and set as mostly goldplate and silverplate pendants, lockets, or brooches, some of which are set with garnets and citrines. One best-selling brooch design bears a hand-tinted photo that she took on a bridge in Venice, of a woman's slender feet in a pair of red velvet Venetian slippers. Ms. Graham will work with your photo's (snapshots are fine) on special order.
